Methods

Electroless

Electroless plating is a refined method in the world of metal coating, often referred to as auto-catalytic or chemical plating. Diverging from traditional techniques, this process abstains from electrical involvement, relying solely on a chemical orchestration. What sets it apart? The outcome is a meticulously even metal layer. The method grants precise control over thickness and volume, offering the versatility to opt for finishes ranging from bright and semi-bright to matte. In essence, it provides a tailored and sophisticated solution for metal enhancement.

Powder coating

Ever wondered how sheet metal gets that awesome finish? Enter powder coating – it's like a cool makeover for your metal! We spray on a dry powder packed with pigments and other cool additives. After a quick bake, the magic unfolds – long molecular chains form, giving your metal a sturdy and stylish upgrade. It's like a fashion statement for your sheet metal, making it look fantastic and ready to stand out!

About Commons

We named this section 'Commons' because we believe that, although original designs may not repeat, they certainly rhyme with each other. In this endeavor, distinguishing your work is strongly connected to how you handle these similarities. How do you make a difference? How do you create a rhyme while maintaining dissonance?
